TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN

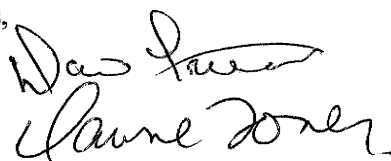

We contracted Dennis Hengel with Hometown Enterprises (2009) Ltd. in the fall of 2007 to build our dream home on our acreage in Trinity Valley. We started in on the project with much excitement, anticipation and, admittedly, some trepidation since we had never built a house before. We were, therefore, pretty much at a loss as to how to even begin such a project, much less see it through to the end. However, very shortly after we hired Dennis and his crew, all our fears were laid to rest and we realized we were in very capable hands. Dennis guided us through every step of the way, from helping finalize our house plans, to obtaining the building permit, to dealing with all the subcontractors and helping us to make the myriad of decisions that go with building a new home.

Dennis and his crew are true craftsman and always acted in a professional and courteous manner on the jobsite. We were very pleased with the quality of work being performed. When speaking with the subcontractor who was putting on our siding, he told us that it was always a pleasure to work on any house that Hometown was building because everything was square and true. We were also extremely happy with the cleanliness of the jobsite. There was never garbage left behind by the crew and everything was tidied up daily in preparation for the next days work.

Building on an acreage does involve special challenges you don't encounter in town; such as, access to power and water and keeping the subcontractors on schedule; we never could have managed this on our own. Dennis personally inspected each subcontractor's job after they were done to ensure that the work was done to his satisfaction and was always able to overcome every obstacle that presented itself in a expedient, courteous and professional manner. He also kept us strictly on budget and, if anything, we were mostly under budget due to his careful planning and high standards. He worked with us throughout the project often offering excellent suggestions and ideas to further enhance the original house plans.

We are extremely happy with the finished product today – we were able to move into our new home in February 2008. The crew had the difficult task of building our home over the winter months in sometimes brutal temperatures with lots of snow. If we ever decided to move and build another home, there is no question in our minds that Hometown would be our first choice as our general contractor.
